Sophocleum*, "is one of the most perplexing in all the plays of Sophocles; παρείρειν always seems to signify to insert, and, as Herman shows, cannot signify applying, observance of, etc.; the Scholiast writes, ὁ πληροῦν τοὺς νόμους καὶ τὴν δικαιοσύνην ὑψίπολις γίγνεται, and Brunck's Glosserist to the same effect, ὁ φυλάττων τοὺς ἐν γῇ ὄντας νόμους." It is unnecessary to state the various readings that have been suggested by commentators for παρείρων, as it appears to be the genuine one, but altogether misunderstood. The poet evidently refers to the administration of justice by the Dicasts, which, as we learn from Aristophanes and Demosthenes, was not always in conformity with the laws of the country. He hints at the oath taken by the judges, who were frequently denominated οἱ ὀμωμοκότες, 'sworn to administer justice according to the laws.' See Demosth. Oration for the Crown, § 1 ; and he infers that the person who paid a regard to the laws of the country, in administering justice, and was not influenced by improper motives, exalted the state. Παρείρω not only signifies to insert, but also to connect with side by side ; hence, the passage may be translated, connecting together the laws of the country and the administration of justice, sanctioned by the oath to the gods, he elevates or exalts the state, i. e. by administering justice according to the laws of the country, as bound by his oath, he exalts the state. *The particle μέν seems to be necessary to mark the contrast with what follows; and ὑψίπολις must be taken in an active sense." ΠΑ˘Σ, πᾶσα, πᾶν, gen. παντός, πάσης, παντός, gen. pl. masc. and neut. πάντων (not παντῶν), every, the whole, all; (1) in the singular, and joined to a noun without the article, it means each, every; as, πᾶς ἄνθρωπος, every man; also, with τις, each one, every one; (2) for ὅλος, η, ον, as, πύλαι πᾶσαι, all the gates or every gate, Il. iv, 809; πάντα νέκυν, the whole dead body or corpse, Id. xxiii, 135; πᾶσα ἀλήθεια, the whole truth; (3) with the article following, all, the whole; as, πάντα τὸν δῆμον, the whole people, all the people; (4) πάντες, almost all, the greater part, the most, Aristot. Poet. 25; πάντες ὅσοι, all such, as many as; ἅμα πάντες, or commonly ἅπαντες, altogether; πάντ' ἄριστος, that has all the qualities or characteristics of excellence, Soph. Œd. C. 1453; (5) with numerals; as, δώδεκα πάντες, twelve in all, Odys. xxiv; (6) τὸ πᾶν, the whole, the essential or principal thing; the universe, all things; but without the article πᾶν is often the same as the Latin quod libet, Aristoph. Acharn. 660; also, adverbially for παντῶς, as, τὸ πᾶν, totally, in general; in the plural, πάντα, all things, every thing; ἐν πάντι εἶναι, or ἐν παντὶ κακοῦ εἶναι, to be in the greatest danger; πάντα εἶναι ἔν τινι, to be every thing to a person, Herodt.; (7) ἡ διὰ πασῶν (χορδῶν συμφωνία being understood), an octave in music, the diapason; (8) τῷ πάντι, totally, universally: ἐπὶ τὸ πᾶν, in general, generally; κατὰ πάντα, in every respect. In the N. T., πᾶσα χαρά, the greatest joy; the highest, the greatest; mere, nothing but; τὸ πᾶν λίθος wholly of stone, Theocr. Idyl. xv, 20; πάντες, all; but οἱ πάντες is joined with numerals in the sense altogether, in all. "Proper names in the sing. are often accompanied by the adjectives πρῶτος, πᾶς, and others in the neuter plural, as predicates, or in opposition, Herodt. iii, 157; πάντα δὴ ἦν (ἐν) τοῖσι Βαβυλωνίοισι, was every thing to them, Id. vii, 156; Thucyd. viii, 95. In these phrases πρῶτα is commonly put with, and πάντα without, the article; yet Eurip. Hec. 788, πρῶτα τῶν ἐμῶν φίλων, where, however, Brunck reads τὰ πρῶτα τῶν, Porson, πρῶτος ὢν· Herodt. i, 122, ἦν τέ οἱ ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τὰ πάντα ἡ Κυνώ, Cyno was every thing in his story, he talked of nothing but Cyno. Valck. Herodt. 576, 66; Ducker ad Thucyd. viii, 95; Herm. ad Viger. 722." Matth. Gr. Gram. § 438. But when πάντα is thus used without the article, the sense is all: with the article, the whole, and in the latter form it is more emphatic. With regard, however, to τὰ πρῶτα, the presence of the article seems essential to fix the meaning, and to prevent it from being taken in its usual sense of first in order, first in time, instead of first in rank, first in importance; πάντῃ, Dor. παντᾷ, adv., everywhere, on all sides; παντῇ, in every way; πάντως, wholly, entirely. The neuter πᾶν is long, but in compounds ἄν is short, as ἅπᾶν, etc. Dunb.

ΠΕΡΙ', prep., used with the gen., dat., and acc.; the radical meaning is, around, round about; with the gen. about, the objects in a fixed position, and may be at some distance from each other; also, of, concerning; with the dat. close about, generally so as to touch each other; also, for; with the acc. motion or action about, tending about, etc.

I. (1) Its common meaning is about, concerning, of, and it answers to the Latin de; περί τινος λέγειν, to speak concerning or of any person; the most general sense is, in consideration of, in respect to, concerning; περὶ τούτων οὐκ ἔρχομαι ἐρέων, respecting these I am not going to speak, Herodt. i, 5; also, for, in defence of; περὶ τοῦ σώματος κινδυνεύειν, Andoc. i, 22; περὶ πατρίδος, for one's country, also expressed by ὑπέρ· also, about, so as to obtain; τυράννιδος πέρι, for the possession of sovereign power, Eurip. Phœn. 534; δεδιέναι περί τινος, also in the dat. περί τινι, Thucyd. iii, 102. (2) The following phrases are deviations, περὶ πολλοῦ, πλείονος, πλείστου, μικροῦ, ἐλάττονος, ἐλαχίστου, οὐδενός, ποιεῖσθαι or ἡγεῖσθαι, magni, pluris, parvi, minoris, nihili aliquid facere, where the idea of ἀντί seems to be implied, as in Thucyd. vi, 69 (3) In Homer περί often signifies præ, and expresses a preference, Il. i, 287.

II. (4) With the dat. it signifies close about, about, in answer to the question where? περὶ τῇ χειρὶ (a ring) φέρειν, Plat. Polit. ii, 359, D. It is joined particularly with the verbs 'to fear,' in the sense of for, properly in consideration of, Il. v, 566; περὶ χάρματι, from joy. Thus likewise θαρρεῖν περί τινι, Plat. Phædr. 114, D. (5) With other verbs it is used only in this sense by the Poets, e. gr. μαχέσασθαι περὶ δαιτὶ for δαιτός, Odys. ii, 245, etc.; Plato also, Protag. 313, E, has ὥρα μὴ περὶ τοῖς φιλτάτοις κυβεύης τε καὶ κινδυνεύῃς. With the dat. it signifies also præ; περὶ φόβῳ, for fear, from fear, præ metu, Æschyl. Choëph. 35; περὶ δείματι, Pind. Pyth. v, 78; Il. xvii, 22; περὶ σθένεϊ βλεμεαίνων, but in ix, 237; xii, 42; xvii, 135, is merely σθένεϊ βλεμεαίνει· περὶ τάρβει, Æschyl. Pers. 682. The prep. is always understood, where it is not expressed: see many instances of the ellipse in Matth Gr. Gram. § 402.

III. (6) With the acc. it signifies particularly motion or action about, round about, in answer to the question where? and whither? περὶ πᾶσαν τὴν Σικελίαν, in the whole of Sicily, round about, Thucyd. vi, 2. It is often put with definitions of time; περὶ τούτους τοὺς χρόνους, about this period; περὶ λύχνων ἁφάς, about the time of lighting lamps, i. e. about nightfall; περὶ πλήθουσαν ἀγοράν, about the filling of the forum, i. e. about the forenoon. With the numerals it signifies about, nearly; περὶ τρισχιλίους, about three thousand. It signifies, also, with regard to, with reference to, Plut. Gorg. 705, A; also, against; as, ἐξαμαρτάνειν περί τινα, to offend against any one. It also signifies, with εἶναι, γίγνεσθαι, ἔχειν, to be engaged about, to be conversant with any thing, Id. Phædr. 259, D; οἱ περί τι ὄντες, those who are occupied about any thing, Id. 69, C. See Matth. Gr. Gram. § 589. (7) Περί, with the article prefixed, and followed by a proper name, indicates the person signified by the proper name, with his companions, followers, etc.; οἱ περὶ Θρασύβουλον, those about Thrasybulus, i. e. Thrasybulus with his soldiers, Thucyd. viii, 105; οἱ περὶ Κέκροπα, Cecrops and his assessors in judgment, Xen. Mem. iii, 5, 10; οἱ περὶ Ξενοφῶντα, Xenophon and his company, Id. Anab. vii, 4, 12. "Sometimes the phrase signifies merely the person, whom the proper name expresses, Plat. Epist. 9, p. 165; οἱ περὶ Ἀρχίππον καὶ Φιλωνίδην, Aristoph. Vesp. 1301. This phrase occurs particularly in this sense in the later Grammarians. In other cases, οἱ περὶ Ἀρχίδαμον, Xen. Hist. Gr. vii, 5, 12, means 'the companions of Archidamus, without himself,' particularly in later writers; instead of which, Plat. Soph. 200, οἱ ἀμφὶ Παρμενίδην καὶ Ζήνωνα ἑταῖροι. We must distinguish from these the cases in which the prepositions are not followed by a proper name, but by another subst., or when the article is neuter; οἱ περὶ φιλοσοφίαν, those who study philosophy; οἱ περὶ τὴν θήραν, the hunters, Id. 209; οἱ περὶ τὴν σοφίαν, Hipp. Maj. p. 5." Matth. Gr. Gram. § 271; the participle διατρίβοντες, or some such, is understood.

IV. (8) In compound words περί often strengthens the sense of the simple word; as, περίεργος, very busy, etc.

Περί denotes distinction or eminence, and is commonly construed with εἰμί or γίνομαι· οἱ περὶ μὲν βουλὴν Δαναῶν, περὶ δ' ἐστὲ μάχεσθαι, who surpass the Greeks in counsel, and surpass them in battle, Il. i, 258; τῷ σε χρὴ πέρι μὲν φάσθαι ἔπος, Il. ix, 100.

Προῤῥιζα, neut. pl., and Προῤῥιζον, neut. sing. of πρόῤῥιζος, used adverbially, by the roots, Æschyl. Pers. 798; radically, fundamentally. From Προῤῥιζος, ου, ὁ, ἡ, or πρόῤῥιξος, with the roots; from the foundation. Th. ῥίζα.

ΠΡΟ'Σ, prep. governing the genitive, dative, and accusative, as follows:

I. With the genitive, from, with, or on the part of, for the interest of, in favor of, against, for, to, towards, according to, by or by the side of, before or in presence of, near; as, πρὸς ἑνὸς ἄρχεσθαι κάλλιστον, it is best to be governed by one; οὔτε πρὸς ὑμῶν οὔτε πρὸς τῆς Ἑλλάδος, neither on your part (or with you) nor on the part of all Greece, Xen. Anab. ii, 3, 11; πρὸς ἡμῶν πείσεται κακά, shall suffer evils from us, Aristoph. Nub. 1120; πρὸς τοῦ φεύγοντος εἰπεῖν, to speak in favor of the accused; πρὸς ἑαυτοῦ τὸ λόγιον ἐλάμβανεν, he interpreted the oracle in favor of himself, Zosim. 16; εἶναι μὲν γὰρ πρὸς αὐτοῦ τὸν ἀετόν, (the omen of) the eagle was in his favor; εἶναι πρός τίνος, to be in favor of or to be on the side of any one; πρὸς σοῦ, οὐδ' ἐμοῦ φράσω, I will say what is for your interest and not mine, or what concerns you and not myself, Soph. Œd. T. 1434; πρὸς ἀνδρὸς ἐχθροῦ ἐπιφέρων τὴν ψῆφον, giving his vote against an enemy or adversary, Dion. Hal. vii; ἔστι μοὶ πρὸς ἀγαθοῦ, it is for my interest or advantage, literally, it is to me for good; κἀκεῖνο δὴ τοῖς πολεμίοις πρὸς κακοῦ γίνοιτ' ἄν, and that would certainly be an injury or disadvantage to the enemies; πρὸς τῆς βουλῆς ἐστί, it is for the interest of the senate, Demosth.; πρὸς ἀνδρός ἐστι, it becomes or belongs to a man, Aristoph. Plut. 355; πρὸς λόγου or λόγον εἶναι, it belongs to or concerns the matter; πρὸς τρόπου, suitably, fitly, or according to fitness, as ἀπὸ τρόπου means the contrary; πρὸς θυμοῦ, agreeable, literally, according with one's mind, as ἀπὸ θυμοῦ is contrary to one's mind or disagreeable; πρὸς ἄλλης, at the command of another woman; τὸ ποιούμενον πρὸς Λακεδαιμονίων, that which has been done by the Lacedæmonians, Herodt. vii, 209: πρὸς ἁλός, by or towards the sea; it is also used in expressing the relationship of families; thus, οἱ πρὸς αἵματος, those of the same blood; οἱ πρὸς πατρός or πρὸς μητρός, the relations on the father's or mother's side; and in the same manner, οἱ πρὸς ἀνδρῶν οἰκεῖοι, and οἱ πρὸς γυναικῶν, the relations on the side of the males and of the females; also, τὸ πρὸς πατρός, μητρός, etc., the father's or mother's family, the noun γένος being understood. In oaths and attestations, πρὸς θεῶν, or πρὸς τῶν θεῶν, by the gods; and sometimes, πρὸς θεῶν καὶ πρὸς ἀνθρώπων, before or in the presence of gods and men; but πρὸς Διός, from Jupiter, Il. i, 239, and πρὸς Τρώων, from or of the Trojans, i, 160. In this formula of adjuration, πρός, with a genitive, the article with the noun is seldom omitted by the comic, and never expressed by the tragic, writers. Porson ad Orest. 92. πρός and ὑπό, with the genitive, have nearly the same force, denoting the instrument or agent by or from which any thing is effected.

II. With the dative, to, towards, at or in, by, near, close, before, moreover, besides or in addition to, Plat.; πρὸς τοῖς ποσίν, at his feet; πρὸς ταῖς θύραις, by or at the door; πρὸς τῇ πόλει, by or near the city; πρὸς Αἰγύπτῳ, in Egypt; πρὸς τοῖς κριταῖς, before or in presence of the judges; εἶναι πρὸς ἑαυτῷ, to reflect or consider within himself; πρὸς δὲ τούτοις, besides or in addition to these things, like ἐπὶ τούτοις· sometimes it is used with the dative to denote an office or official duty, like ἐπί with the genitive; as, οἱ πρὸς ταῖς κύλιξι, those who had charge of the drinking-vessels, Herodian iii, 5.

III. With the accusative, to, at, towards, for or on account of, for the purpose of, in order to, among or with; ἔρχομαι πρός σε, I come to you; πρὸς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ, at his feet; πρὸς τὴν γῆν, on the earth; πρὸς τὸν οὐρανόν, towards the sky, Cyrop. i, 4, 11; τὰ πρὸς ἡμᾶς, the things which concern us; τὸ πρὸς χάριν, beauty or elegance of composition, Longin. i; πρὸς τὴν πόλιν, in regard to the city, Lys.; πρὸς ἅπαντας, towards all; πρὸς τί ταῦτα λέγεις, why or for what do you say these things; it may also be rendered with its noun adverbially; as, πρὸς ὀργήν, angrily or through anger; πρὸς ὑπερβολήν, excessively, to excess; πρὸς χάριν, in order (to gain) favor; πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν, for the purpose of show or exhibition; πρὸς καιρόν, for the time, for the moment; and also, seasonably; πρὸς βίαν, by force; πρὸς ἡδονήν, willingly; πρὸς αὐλόν, to the (sound of the) flute; πρὸς καταδίκας ἡ χρέα, on account of the sentences against them, or of their debts, Dion. Hal. iv; πρὸς ἀλλήλους, with one another, between themselves; πρὸς τὴν νόσον, (efficacious) against a disease; πρὸς ἀξίαν ἑκάστοις διανεῖμαι, to distribute to each according to rank or merit; πρὸς ἄλλον ζῆν, to live according to (the will of) another; πρὸς γὲ τὸ παρόν, according to or considering the present (state of things); πρὸς μίαν ἡμέραν, for one day; πρὸς πολὺν χρόνον, for a long time; πρὸς τὰ ἔτη, for your years, Theophr. Char. 2; πρὸς βασίλεα, with the king; πρὸς οὐδέν, on no account; πρὸς ταῦτα, on this account; ὡς πρὸς τὸ μέγεθος τῆς πολίως, in comparison with the size of the city, Thucyd. iii, 113.

IV. In compound words πρός implies, (1) accession, approach, coming to; as, προσκαλεῖσθαι, to call (a person) to one; προσγράφειν, to write in addition to any thing already written; πρόσοδοι, revenues, i. e. things which come to the treasury; (2) proximity; as, προσκαθίζεσθαι, to sit near to; (3) προσφέρεσθαί τινι, to be affected towards any one; (4) it increases the force of the simple word; as, προσαιτεῖν, to ask for something in addition, to ask earnestly, to beg; προσεπιστίζεσθαι, to procure provisions in greater abundance, or in addition to, Polyb.

P, the seventeenth letter of the Greek alphabet; as a numeral it denotes a hundred; and, with a mark underneath (ϱ), a hundred thousand. The later Attics, in words usually written with ρσ, use a double ϱ, as, for ἄρσην, ἄῤῥην. The Æolo-Doric tribes, as the Lacedæmonians, terminated several words with ϱ, instead of ς· as, ἴαττορ for ἵαπος, πόϊρ for παῖς, and hence the Latin puer;

also, arbos and arbor, etc. The Æolians frequently prefixed the letter β before ρ as, βρόδον for ῥόδον. The poets are said to have doubled the ρ in the middle of words, especially compounds, to lengthen the syllable; as, ἀπορρίπτω for ἀπορίπτω, etc. It seems very doubtful if the ancient poets adopted this practice, as it is well known that the Greeks disliked the harsh and grating sound of this letter; and besides, in almost every example where double ρ is found, the harmony of the verse requires the lengthened tone, independent of two consonants, Plat. Crat. 434, D.

'Ρ', for ῥά, which see.

'Ρά, enclitic particle, like ἄρ, from which it is made by metathesis, truly, indeed, certainly, surely. In Homer it is often equivalent to I say; τὸν ῥά, him I say, Il. xiii, 177.

Τηλύγετος, η, ον, begotten or born in old age, Il. v, 153; ix, 478; the youngest; dear to parents, dearly beloved, Id. iii, 175. Both the meaning and the derivation of this word are extremely doubtful. The common interpretation, "born in the father's old age," does not suit several of the passages where the word occurs. Buttmann, Lexil. § 101, has examined it with his usual acuteness; but, though he has shown the fallacy of the common meaning and derivation, he has failed, in my opinion, in establishing its connection with τελευτή or τελευταῖος, the last. The change from τελεύγετος to τηλύγετος is too violent; neither does τελευταῖος convey the idea of dearly or tenderly beloved. Besides, it cannot apply to Hermione, the daughter of Helen, who was not her last, but her only child. Παιδά τε τηλυγέτην καὶ ὁμηλικίην ἐρατεινήν, Il. iii, 175. The more probable derivation seems to be, the perfect of θάλλω, namely, τέθηλα, hinted at by Passow in his Lexicon, whence comes θῆλυς, and γάω or γέω, denoting young, tender, and hence, an object of affection, love; or what will perhaps suit the derivation better, in some instances, blooming, in the prime of life. In Il. xiii, 470, ἀλλ' οὐκ Ἰδομενῆα φόως λάδε, τηλύγετον ὥς· τηλύγετον here evidently means tender, and, as connected with θῆλυς, timid; τηλύγετος may then be considered a dialectic variety for θηλύγετος, signifying tender, tenderly beloved; also, blooming. See Il. ix, 143, 482; Id. v, 153.

Τηλωπός, ῦ, ὁ, ἡ, seen afar off; far distant, Soph. Phil. 216; far from the sight. Fr. τῆλε and ὤψ.

Ὑποτειχίζω, f. ίσω, to erect a counter wall, Thucyd. vi, 99. Fr. ὑπό and τειχίζω. Th. τεῖχος.
Ὑποτειχισις, εως, ή, the building of a cross wall; and Ὑποτείχισμα, ατος, τό, a wall under, a counter wall, Thucyd. vi, 100. Same Th.
Ὑποτελέω, ῶ, f. έσω, to pay tribute, to pay a penalty, Herodt. i, 171; Demosth. 142, 1; to pay. Th. τέλος.
Ὑποτελής, ἐος, ὁ, ή, tributary, τοῦτων Χίοι οὐχ' ὑποτελεῖς ὄντες φόσου, Thucyd. vii, 57; paying tribute or taxes. Same Th.
Ὑποτέλλομαι, to rise up from beneath; to begin to appear. Fr. τέλλομαι.
Ὑποτέμνω, Ion. ὑποτάμνω, Herodt. v, 86; f. μῶ, pf. τέτμηκα, to cut from beneath, Xen. Hist. ii, 3, 17; to cut slanting down, Aristoph. Eq. 314; to cut off, Il. v, 74; to take from; to intercept; to cut short; 2. a. ὑπέταμον and ὑπέτμην, Xen. Hist.; Aristoph. Eq. 288. Mr. Mitchell, in a note on this line in his edition of the Knights, says, "the text here brings us upon two very difficult terms" — περιαιρεῖν, appears to be here a term of the speaker's trade, Plat. in Polit. 288, D; ἱμψύχων σωμάτων περιαιροῦσα σκυτοτομική. The expression seems to me one of those παρ' ὑπονοίαν, which abound so much throughout this play. "I'll cut and clip you, with what? the tools of my trade? No, but with tools in which I am equally versed, braggart lies and deceptions." With all submission to the learned commentator, and also to his predecessors, he seems to me to have mistaken the meaning of the lines. He and they take περιελῶ to be, I suppose, the 1. sing. subj. 2. aor. of περιαιρέω, and Mr. M. translates it as above. But if it is the subjunctive, it ought to be turned, "let me cut and clip," which assuredly will not suit with Cleon's determined purpose of vengeance. It is strange that no commentator, so far as I know, with the exception of Bergler, ever thought of περιελαύνω. But even he does not appear to have had a correct view of the scope of the passage. What does the sausage-seller say in the preceding line? κυνοκοπήσω σου τὸ νῶτον, I will flog your back like a dog that is at fault and yelps. There is evidently here an allusion to the chase; perhaps, in the Aristophanic way, to the chase for honors and distinctions from the Athenian rabble; and it was very likely suggested to the poet's mind by the contest between the two worthies, which could bawl loudest. Cleon replies in allusion to the same, περιελῶ σ' ἀλαζονείας, I will course you round and round for your boasting (yelping); περιελῶ, by elision and contraction for περιελάσω, future of περιελαύνω. The noun must be in the genitive, being governed by ἕνεκα, understood. The reply of the sausage-seller is in the same spirit, and has an allusion to the same pursuit; ὑποτεμοῦμαι τὰς ὁδούς σου, "I will cut short your course," as Xen. Hist. i, 6, 15, ὑποτεμνόμενος τὸν εἰς Σάμον πλοῦν. If, then, ὑποτεμοῦμαι is the fut. middle of ὑποτέμνω, it is quite evident that περιελῶ in the preceding line must also be a future; but it cannot be the future of περιαιρέω, which is περιαιρήσω. Th. τέμνω.

T.* 1511; the heart, Il. xi, 682; sense, reason, wisdom, prudence; φρένες, the parts about the heart; μεταξὺ τῶν φρενῶν τε καὶ αὐχένος, Plat. Tim. 87, A; σὺ δ' ἔνι φρεσὶ βάλλεο σῇσι, and do thou fix it in thy heart or breast, Il. i, 297; also, the powers of life; ὦ πόποι, ἦ ῥά τις ἔστι καὶ εἰν ἀΐδαο δόμοισι ψυχὴ καὶ εἴδωλον, ἀτὰρ φρένες οὐκ ἔνι πάμπαν, Id. xxiii, 184; ἐνὶ φρεσὶ ποιεῖν, to fix in the mind, Id. xiii, 55; μηδ' ἀφιστάναι φρενῶν, nor withdraw your attention, Soph. Phil. 853. Homer commonly uses φρένες to signify the powers of the mind, or the mind in general; πράγματα καντιγραφὰς πολλῶν ταλάντων....ἄξια σῇ φρενὶ συμβουλευσομένους μετὰ σοῦ, Aristoph. Nub. 471. Brunck translates these verses, "atque communicare tuæ solertiæ negotia et lites, multis talentis æstimatas, de quibus consultabunt tecum." Dindorf observes, "manifestum est dici causas, accusationes (πράγματα), iisque oppositas, defensiones (ἀντιγραφάς) lites, quæ multis talentis æstimabuntur." Mr. Mitchell, the learned editor of this play, and the elegant translator of some of Aristophanes's Comedies, says, A learned friend, whom I consulted on the passage writes, "Rather, I think, worth many talents to your mind, i. e. (by a complimentary periphrasis) to you....matters that will bring you in many talents, Aristoph. Acharn. viii, 205. It 's worth (something) to the state to get hold of this man." I apprehend all these translations are incorrect, through ignorance of the proper construction of the words. The construction in the following passages is similar, ὡς (Σωκράτης) ἄξιος εἴη θανάτου τῇ πόλει, that Socrates deserved death from the state, Xen. Mem. i, 1, 1; καὶ οὐδὲν ἐλάττονος ἄξιον σπουδῆς ἐμοί, and no less deserving of my earnest attention, or of attention from me, Dem. de Coron., sub. init. The construction of the passage in Aristoph. is exactly similar. The words should, I imagine, be rendered, to consult with you upon charges and defences worth many talents to them as proceeding from your judgment. The compliment here is intended to the judicial skill of Strepsiades, advising causes, and not as a source of gain. In compounds φρήν takes the form of -φρων, -φρονος, as εὔφρων, κακόφρων, etc. Perhaps from φράω, whence φράδω, φράζω, etc.

Χαροπῖο, gen. Ion. of χαροπός, which see.

Χαροποιός, οῦ, ὁ, ἡ, causing joy. Fr. χαρά and ποιέω.

Χαροπός, οῦ, ὁ, ἡ. Both the derivation and the meaning of this word are very doubtful. It is said to denote a sky-blue color ; also, azure ; likewise, tawny or ruddy. It is evidently not derived from χαρά and ὤψ, as stated by Passow and others, but more probably from an old verb χάρω, whence χαράσσω, χάρμη, etc., and ὄψ, the eye or countenance. Compounded in this manner, it will signify one who has a stern, threatening countenance or aspect ; as is well ex- pressed by Tacitus, in his description of the Germans, truces et cærulei oculi ; and this meaning will accord with the use of the word in the few passages where it occurs; ἄρκτοι τ', ἀγρότεροι τε σύες, χαροποί τε λέοντες...., and lions having a threatening or glaring aspect, Odys. xi, 610 ; similar to the torva leæna of Virgil, Eclogue ii, 63. In the Philoctetes of Sophocles, v. 1131, we find χαρόπων τ' ἤθνη θηρῶν, and the tribes of fierce wild beasts ; and not as the word is translated by Ellendt., Lex. Sophocl., fulgidis oculis preditus. It has been observed by naturalists, that the eyes of lions in particular, and other savage animals, when irritated, assume a red, fiery appearance, and flash fire as it were. Agreeably to the idea above stated, χαροπότης, ητος, ἡ, will signify neither azure-blue, nor the clear blue color of the eye, but a stern or threatening aspect, fierceness.

Χαροπότης, ητος, ἡ, the blueness of the sky or sea.

Χαρῶσιν, 3. pl. 1. f. of χαίρω.

Χαρράν, ἡ, indecl., the name of a city, Charran. Hebr. heat.

All the commentators and grammarians agree that the noun is derived from* χείρ, and that it signifies a stone that may be grasped by the hand. This appears to me very doubtful, as the mass of matter with which the river threatened to overwhelm Achilles did not consist of stones only, but πολὺν ὀρυμαγδὸν φιτρῶν καὶ λάων, v, 314. It seems more natural to derive it from χέω, especially as in the passage above it is connected with περιχεύας.

Χεράς, άδος, ἡ, a heap of stones, gravel; especially, the deposit of a river, sand, stones, gravel, silt.

Χεριέθ, or χενιέθ, Jer. xxxvii, 16, according to the Syriac, a shop, cell, dwelling; also, the name of a building or place on Mount Moriah, and so probably in this passage; according to others, a pillory, the stocks. Gesen. Lex. by Gibbs.

Χέρης, ηος, ὁ, (found in the dat. and acc. sing. and nom. pl. only,) one who maintains himself by the labor of his hands, and hence inferior to a warrior, etc.; worse, smaller, inferior, Il. i, 80. Analogy is against the formation of the genitive in ηος· in all the places where it occurs in the Iliad and Odyssey, the penult is the first syllable of the foot, and must therefore be lengthened. I have no doubt that the genitive originally was χέρεος. See Odys. xv, 323, and xvii, 228. Th. χείρ.

Ω

Ω is the twenty-fourth and last letter of the Greek alphabet; it is composed of two omicrons (οο, ω), and is called μέγα, that is, great, to distinguish it from ο μικρόν. As a numeral it stands for eight hundred, and with a mark beneath (ω,), eight hundred thousand. In the Dor. and Æol. dialects, ω is used as ου in the gen. sing. of the second declension; as, λόγω for λόγου. In several words it occupies the place of ου, in the common dialect; Μῶσα, βωλή, ὠρανός, for Μοῦσα, βουλή, οὐρανός. But it may be supposed that both it and ου are contractions for οο, as Μόοσα, Μῶσα, and Μοῦσα, etc. In such a word as λιπῶσα, it is evidently for λιπόνσα, λιπῶσα, as in the Æolic dialect, the form is λιποῖσα, where the ν is converted into ι. It is changed into α in the third declension of some simple nouns; as, Ποσειδᾶν, for Ποσειδῶν, ῶνος, ὁ. It is also changed into α in participles which have it, as κοινάτων, for κοινώσων. It is often metaphorically used to signify the last, as α is for the first; ἐγὼ εἰμὶ τὸ Α καὶ τὸ Ω, I am the first and the last, Rev. i, 8; with the circumflex ῶ, it is the sign of the vocative for all the numbers and genders.
